"The true intent and meaning of this art, is not to legislate Slavery into any Terri f ry a. State, nor to exclude at therefrom; but in their own way, subject to the Constitution of the Uni ed States."

The reader will recognize the above as the celebrated "stump speech" in the Kan cas and Nebraska set. It was upon this little period that Senator Douglas hoped to throw enough sand in the eyes of the peo ple, to blind them to the real object of the Kaneas and Nebranka bill. In 1856 every. Democratic orator throughout the land committed the shove period to memory, and apoke it trippingly on the tengue .-Every little put-house politician explained the whole ten r and effect of the bill which repealed the Missouri Compromise, by a simple repetition of the language contained in the above quotation. It was always and on every occasion a knock down orgument, which enabled the followers of the "Little Grant" to triumph in every debate. Upon every stomp the Republicans told the people, that this explanation of the Kansas and Nebra-ka act - this little "stump speech" at ached to that bill-like its author, was all humbug, all deception. all demagogueism. That the Democracy of foolscap .- New Albany Tribune. did not mean to leave the people of the Territories "perfectly free to form and reg slate their domestic institutions in their States" would be construed to mean that the Constitution gave the slaveholder the right to take his slaves into all the public Territories, and have them protected there .
